7 Little-Known “Babe Magnet” Locations Where You Can Meet Tons Of Beautiful Women

by Mike Haines

Babe Magnet Location #1:

Whole Foods / Grocery Store

Health food stores like Whole Foods are chock-full of hotties who are healthy and fit with trim athletic bodies.

So let's say you're in the vegetable aisle and you see a perfect 10 in yoga pants inspecting the avocados.

Go up to her and say, "Hey, I'm making guacamole. What type of avocados should I use?"

Boom, you're in.

If the girl is really stunning and gives you butterflies in your stomach, an extremely direct approach can also work well here.

I like to rock up to her, take a deep breath, and say, “Excuse me. I’m sorry if this seems out of nowhere but you are...” (pause) “....absolutely adorable.” (pause) “I’m Michael. What’s your name.”

Using a lot of long pauses coupled with unwavering eye contact and a slight smile is the key to making the direct approach work.

Babe Magnet Location #2:

Farmers Markets

Again, these places tend to attract a ton of fit, healthy, intelligent young women.

There's a lot going on at the farmer's market so there's lots of different "observational remarks" you can use to start a conversation based on what's happening in the environment.

For example, say you spot a cutie looking at some clothes. You can take something off the rack and put it over your chest and say, "What do you think? Does it suit me?" (This bit works better if the clothes wouldn't suit you at all, like if they're for a baby or something.)

Or say she's standing in line for coffee. You can wander up and be like, "I'm trying to quit caffeine, but this smells so good I can't resist."

When she begins to answer, immediately interrupt her by saying, "I lied, actually. I came over here because I thought you looked lonely standing here and I needed an excuse to talk to you. I'm Michael, what's your name."

And finally, if (like me) you're too lazy to come up with an observational opener, you can always just go direct, rock up to the girl and say, "Hey excuse me, but you're absolutely fking gorgeous and I'm going to regret it if I don't say hello. How's your day going?"

Babe Magnet Location #3:

Yoga, Meditation & “Mindfulness” Events

These places are jam-packed with cuties in my experience.

Also, girls who are into mindfulness and other woo-woo crap tend to be straight-up freaks in the bedroom if you haven't noticed. You should look into it.

You can find mindfulness type events by going to websites like meetup.com or by searching for events near you in Facebook Events.

It's better if you have some actual interest in meditation or whatever the group is about (which you should, by the way — meditation will make you a bad motherfker and improve your confidence with chicks.)

Because you're going to be in a group setting and everyone will be mingling with each other, you don't need an excuse to talk to her. You can just rock up and say, "Hey, I'm [your name], who are you."

Babe Magnet Location #4:

Yoga Classes & Dance Classes (Salsa, etc)

As just about everyone already knows by now, yoga classes are a gold-mine of hot women.

Same with dance classes, especially salsa.

Hip hop dancing is good and will have a high number of hot girls, but salsa really has the edge here because you're going to be getting up close and personal on the physical level with the sexy mamacitas in the class.

Check up on what kind of classes your gym offers and then go to a few of them to scout the talent.

You may also want to consider signing up for salsa classes. The beauty of these places is that they select for the type of woman who is adventurous, sensual, and open to experiences... all of which is going to be good whether you want a hot, passionate girlfriend or a fun fling.

Getting good at dancing will also make you more attractive to women in general. Women think guys who can dance well are better in bed, and it's true, I am an excellent dancer. So by taking dance classes you get to swoop cuties while at the same time improving your chances of swooping future cuties. Win win.

If it's a salsa class, see if you can partner up with a cute girl and then you'll naturally get introduced that way. After the class you can flirt with her some more, then ask for her number. You can say, "you know what, even though you're a terrible dancer you are pretty cute. Let's get a drink tonight..."

With a yoga class, I probably wouldn't try to hit on the girl while the class is going on.

That's a lie, I definitely would. But a better move would be to hang out after the class is finished then engage her in conversation as everyone's on the way out and see if she wants to go get a green tea with you.

She'll be horny from all the endorphins the yoga session pumped into her body, so it's a cinch she'll agree. Boom, now you got a hot little yoga bunny in the mix.

Notice how this tip was a 2 for 1? I'm generous like that. Also I like the number 7.

Professional Networking Events

Yeah, yeah, I know.

Professional networking... sounds like a yawn fest, right?

Right, but what you didn't think of is that the women in these places tend to be way above average compared to the normal population.

Yuppie professional chicks are generally fit, intelligent and ambitious. Plus, they have money so they're always dolled up and cosmetically on-point, with waxed bikini areas, manicured nails, beautiful hair and makeup, the works.

Look at it this way, as a man you want to hit on those mid-twenties hotties from your office with every fiber of your being but you don't want to risk getting in trouble with HR, right?

Well, start going to networking events in your industry, and you can swoop the hotties from other people's offices.

Smooth, right?

Now here's how to play it.

First off, don't get sucked into a serious, logical frame of mind.

Don't let the environment dictate your state.

The environment is going to be saying, "we're all here to talk about business, it's very serious, businessy businessy business."

This is not the right frame of mind for macking chicks.

To swoop some yuppie honeys, (or to swoop any honeys for that matter), you need to be playing it loose and relaxed, with a silly, light-hearted approach to life which refuses to take anything seriously.

Essentially, you want to zig when everyone else zags.

Since it's a professional event, the other guys who try to hit on her here will usually lead with talking about their job — they'll try to brag about how successful and powerful they are.

Do the opposite.

Evade talking about work completely, and change the topic to funny or humorous things when she tries to bring it up.

If she asks what you do, say, “Me? I’m unemployed actually. I just snuck in here to see if someone would give me a job.”

Keep everything playful and light-hearted — it will provide a welcome refrain from the drudgery of talking about work related stuff which she’s expecting and you’ll stand out big time.

Babe Magnet Location #6:

Charity Events & Volunteering

I first heard about the meeting women at charity events tip from the notorious Las Vegas playboy Michael Sartin.

As he put it, “You know the type of women you don’t tend to meet at these charity events? Psychopaths.”

It’s a good point when you think about it.

Women who are nasty, manipulative and evil don’t tend to spend their Thursday nights helping out at a soup kitchen or an animal shelter.

And by extension, the women who do spend time doing these things tend to be kind and pleasant human beings who are a delight to be around — girlfriend material in other words.

Don't go and do volunteering just to meet girls. Do it because you want to do it anyway and because it feels good to be the People's Champ — but of course always keep an eye out for the talent... you can find some real diamonds in the rough in the volunteering world.

(And by a diamond I mean an ultra sexy, adorable hottie with a neat sexy little body who puts a massive smile on your face whenever you wake up beside her.)

Like with the professional networking events — keep your interactions here light, playful and funny. Avoid logical conversations and questions.

Babe Magnet Location #7:

Cooking Classes

The thing about a cooking class is that by its nature it's going to attract the very type of woman who most guys want as a girlfriend:

Want a girlfriend who cooks and cleans for you? Of course you do. Well, there's few places in the world that you're more likely to meet a girl who fits that psychological profile than a cooking class.

Like with salsa classes, yoga retreats, charity events and a few others on this list, cooking classes are especially good if you want to avoid "cold approach" — it's a shared group experience where everyone is going to be mingling and getting to know each other so you can avoid the stress of approaching her as a complete stranger.

The move here is to tease her over something she cooked. Make fun of it and say how yours is much better — especially if hers is perfect and yours looks atrocious. This creates a flirty, fun vibe and will avoid the friend zone.

Again, zig when others zag.

The “natural” thing guys do in this situation is to compliment the girl on the meal she cooked and tell her how good it looks — BZZZ, instant friendzone territory. Instead, do the opposite. Look at what she cooked and shake your head and sigh sadly as if it’s so bad, you feel sorry for her. (Again, this is especially funny if what you made is even worse.)

Obviously she should know you're joking here. You do this in a funny, semi-humorous way. The point is to make her laugh, not to crush her spirit.

BONUS:

How To Get Her Phone Number For A Date And Avoid Falling Into The “Friend-Zone”

So you’ve met a cute girl and you’ve got her into conversation.

What next?

How do you get her phone number and get her to agree to meet you for a date, so you can take things further?

The answer is simple...

You need to be HONEST.

Specifically, you need to express your HONEST and AUTHENTIC DESIRE for her.

Listen:

Has this ever happened to you?

You got talking to a woman for 10 minutes....
30 minutes... even an hour...

And although the conversation was lively and she was friendly and enthusiastic...

When you asked for her phone number, she said, "I'm sorry, but... no."

Or... "I have a boyfriend."

The cause of all these issues is FAILURE TO CONVEY "SEXUAL INTENTION" from the start.

The girl must know "what's up."

She must know that you desire her in a sexual way... NOT as a “friend”.

And she must know that from the very beginning of the interaction.

Communicating your desire for a woman you’ve just met is scary.

I get it.

There’s a possibility she’ll reject you.

However... it’s much better to find out if she isn’t interested early...

Rather than wasting time talking to her for hours, just to get the “let’s just be friends” speech when you try to make a move.

So with any girl you meet....

You need to get comfortable with telling the truth.

And specifically, you need to tell the truth about why you're there talking to her — which is as a man to a woman, and not as a “friend to a friend”.

How do you do this?

Simple:

If you find her sexy, tell her.

If you think she's absolutely gorgeous, tell her.

If she makes your pulse race and gives you butterflies in your stomach... tell her!

Tell her this stuff early.

Let her know why you're there.

Put it on the table.

I'm a man, I'm here because I find you sexually attractive, and I'm unapologetic about that fact.

You don't use those words of course, but that's the vibe.

Raw truth and honesty. No bullshit. Pure authenticity.

If she likes you, you lose nothing by telling her you're interested in her.

But if she's unavailable, you'll quickly find out that's the case — but she'll respect you for being upfront and honest with her.

And if she's on the fence about you... you will often find that simply being radically honest about how attracted to her you are will impress her, because it's so bold and daring, and she will become attracted to you.

Once you've expressed sexual intent, you can go back to having a normal conversation... teasing her... challenging her, etc.

Don't be a one note song.

But now, instead of being an awkward, polite, “friendly” conversation where it's not clear why you're there — the interaction between you will be simmering with sexual tension.

At this point, when you later go to ask for her number, it will make sense... and she'll be much more likely to say yes.

Ultimately, it's all about living your life with authenticity.

When you see a woman you're attracted to, you approach her.

You don't hide your intentions. You let her know them.

You're not ashamed of the fact that you have sexual desires.

You're open and unapologetic about the fact that you're a man with a healthy sex drive.

Women respect this approach, and it will always get you further than hiding your intentions and trying to creep into a girl's bed by pretending to be her "friend".

If you want to know more about how to flirt with women in a way that makes them hot with desire for you, watch this video by my friend Kate Spring.

Kate is not only a total hottie but really smart too!

In this video, she shares 3 tips to getting the woman you want wet between the legs and fantasizing about you... even if you've just met.

Including:

- A technique to make her crave your touch...
- A technique for getting her to think about kissing you...
- And a way to make her dream about you all day long...

It's powerful...

It's practical...

And best of all, you can use these techniques right away...

Go here to watch Kate's video now.

And be ready to take notes...

Also make sure to keep an eye on your emails. I have more cool stuff to send you soon coming down the pipes...

Stay tuned!

And as always—
